An Often Repeated Story
Today, somewhere in Florida, there’s a young child sitting on a curb with their head in their hands. Things haven’t been going well. They’re being picked on at school. Their grades are falling. They’re mixed up with the wrong crowd.

Most kids would turn to their parents for help, but this child’s parents aren’t there to turn to. This child only has one parent, a dad. The father has custody, but isn’t home when school lets out. This father works two jobs to make ends meet. They are scared, confused and angry and don’t know what to do.

They didn’t ask for this. The situation isn’t their fault. They’re just a kid. And they need help.

A Happy Ending?
There can be a happy ending to this story, and the ending involves YOU.

The Sheriffs of Florida realized the need in our State to help these children—a way to help them gain control of their lives. They established the Florida Sheriffs Youth Ranches.

The Florida Sheriffs took on the responsibility to create a safe place for Florida’s children to receive the help and guidance they need but, they can’t carry the burden alone. Florida’s children need you too.

I am getting the help I need to see reality clearly and make the choices I need to go down the right path. ~ Karissa, Youth Villa

“Cottage Parents” help each child develop a strong sense of responsibility and respect through the “work, study, play and pray” philosophy. This, along with counseling, academic schooling and other services, helps deserving boys and girls develop strong values and positive behavior as they become productive young men and women.
